Big Four accountant starts up her firm with the right tax and research technology in place

“Checkpoint is a great product, which I have found to be extremely reliable. I particularly like the weekly news updates. I wouldn’t hesitate in recommending this solution to other practices looking for comprehensive research and guidance in all areas of tax.”

Emily Collins Personal Tax Ltd is located in Stockport and was established in 2016. Owner Emily Collins previously worked for one of the Big Four accounting firms in all areas of personal taxation.

After 20 successful years, ATT and CTA-qualified Emily decided it was time to start her own practice, focusing on personal tax services for high net worth individuals. In addition, she provides advice on income and capital gains tax planning, business structuring, inheritance tax and succession planning.

Emily chose Digita Personal Tax from Thomson Reuters to automate her tax return process. She was also looking for a solution that would provide accurate tax research and news online; she found this in Thomson Reuters Checkpoint.

Checkpoint provides Emily with up-to-date UK tax information and research, analysis and more. It meets the everyday needs of busy tax professionals with details of rules, regulations and tax issues affecting UK companies.

As a result, Emily can research tax information faster with more accuracy and greater confidence her recommendations and return preparation.

Emily says: “In my previous employment, I was always provided with up-to-date legislation and this was something I was keen to maintain within my own practice. Having the ability to look at topics within the tax books online and find up-to-date legislation is a great asset. It’s difficult to quantify how much time this saves me, but during busier times I find myself using Checkpoint on a daily basis.”

Emily adds, “Checkpoint is a great product, which I have found to be extremely reliable. I particularly like the weekly news updates.”
